

A face in the crowd

A lone black youngster is among those gathered on the Ellipse in Washington yesterday to hear opposition to forced school busing for integration.

Antibusing rallys full of Wallace supporters

WASHINGTON (AP)—About 800 persons turned out Saturday for a rally behind the White House to oppose school busing and were told "We have a rapport with this administration."

This assessment came from Irene McCabe, the Pontiac, Mich., mother who staged a 44-day walk from her home to Washington to dramatize her opposition to school busing.

Mrs. McCabe and L. Brooks Patterson, general counsel for the National Council against Forced Busing, said John Ehrlichman, President Nixon's domestic affairs adviser, told them Friday that if Nixon's antibusing proposals are not passed by Congress or are struck down by the courts, the President will immediately send to Congress a constitutional amendment to bar busing.

Nixon's proposal calls for legislation imposing a moratorium on forced school busing. Organizers of the rally, who had predicted an attendance of 5,000, obviously were disappointed by the turnout which included many who wore buttons supporting Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama for the presidency. Wallace rose to political power in Alabama as an ardent segregationist but has been soft-pedaling this issue in his national campaigning.

Two men selling "Wallace Hard Hate" were arrested on charges of violating a federal regulation against sale of goods in a park. They put up some resistance and many in the crowd expressed anger at the arrests but Mrs. McCabe counseled the audience to ignore the incident.

Mrs. McCabe at one point exhorted the crowd to sing "We Shall Overcome," the civil rights anthem, but got little response.

Surgeons cautioned on artery by-pass method

By ROBERT STRAND

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Heart surgeons were warned Saturday to go slow on their exciting new operation, the artery by-pass, which will be performed this year on 35,000 Americans.

Ten per cent will die on the operating table but the future of the others is promising if uncertain.

Many surgeons are much more enthusiastic about the bypass operation than they were about the heart transplants because of the high mortality rate among heart transplant patients.

The surgeons see the by-pass operation as a promise that death might be long postponed among victims of heart disease which now causes 674,000 U.S. deaths annually.

When arteries or veins become narrowed or clogged by fat, blood flowing to the heart diminishes or halts, and heart muscle dies as a result. In a by-pass operation, a vein section is taken from the leg and used to make a by-pass around the clogged area.

At the Interamerican Congress of Cardiologists, Dr. Arthur Selzer, a San Francisco cardiologist, said much medical experience is necessary before the operations can be judged. Selzer himself had heart attack five years ago and refuses to undergo the preliminary test to a by-pass.
